The small but rapidly growing city of Leander is located between Travis and Williamson Counties. Leander is considered to be a suburb of Austin, as it is located directly to the north of the sprawling metropolis.

In 2000, the town had a meager population of just 7,600 people. Since that time, the population has exploded to more than 56,000, making it one of the fastest-growing cities in the nation.

Leander's most appealing attribute is its abundance of natural beauty. Residents and guests of Leander enjoy a balanced mix of hill country and flatlands. The city makes great use of its natural resources and is home to several stunning parks.

One of the most popular outdoor destinations in Leander is Lakewood Park. The park offers recreational activities like fishing, bird-watching, camping, and swimming. Sandy Creek Park is an equally enjoyable destination within Leander, especially for boaters. Boat owners can use Sandy Creek Park to access the well-known Lake Travis.

Water-based activities dominate Leander's recreational options. In addition to the parks, residents and guests can test their athleticism at Waterloo Adventures. The water park features water-based inflatable obstacle courses situated directly on the lake.

Despite having a reputation as a fun and relaxing destination, Leander is also home to plenty of great restaurants. Bella Sera of Leander offers a high-end dining experience and specializes in Italian cuisine.

For those interested in a more laid-back experience, the archaeologically-themed eatery known as The Dig Pub is a prime destination. Although technically located in neighboring Cedar Park, The Dig Pub is just a short car ride away from the heart of Leander.

In terms of higher education, Leander residents have easy access to Austin Community College's San Gabriel campus.
