Anderson Mill Limited District is a vibrant community located in North Austin with a population approaching 10,000 people. However, it is no longer a census-designated place (CDP), which means that the community's population is not calculated apart from that of the City of Austin.

Jollyville is also located in North Austin, adjacent to Anderson Mill Limited District. Like Anderson Mill, Jollyville was once a CDP and had its population calculated separately from Austin's core districts. However, it has also had its CDP status removed, which is why the exact population of Jollyville is unknown. The population is estimated to be somewhere in the 16,000-18,000 range.

Anderson Mill residents have access to a modern aquatic center that offers seasonal pool passes, day admission, and other entry options. Residents can also partake in organized classes like swim lessons or water aerobics. They can rent pools for parties or special events as well.

Anderson Mill and Jollyville residents have access to an abundance of entertainment and recreational activities. A few highlights include Great Hills Park Trail, the Austin Aquarium, and Lake Austin.

Foodies will love exploring North Austin, as some of the city's best eateries are located in or near Jollyville/Anderson Mill. The Barley Swine specializes in serving up locally sourced dishes and always has something unique on the menu. Those interested in ramen, dumplings, and other Asian cuisines should visit the Fat Dragon.

Those are only a few of the many stellar restaurants that call Austin home. Other worthy mentions are the French Quarter Grille, Garbo's Lobster, Little Ola's Biscuits, Revelry on the Boulevard, and Slab BBQ & Beer. The communities of Jollyville and Anderson Mill feature dining options to suit any palette or satisfy any craving.
