Located between Austin and Waco in the rolling hills of Bell County, tourists and locals alike love the Salado art scene. Salado's Cultural Arts District has built a stunning reputation, attracting visitors to the boutiques and surrounding outdoor beauty.

Salado College, now a museum, was established in 1859 and admitted both men and women — and boys and girls because the founders believed that education should be available to everyone. It became a cornerstone for the village's development and its artistic reputation.

Salado is a certified Music Friendly Community, meaning that the State of Texas has recognized it for its efforts in fostering the development of the music industry. The village hosts many events throughout the year featuring live music and has stores, cafes, restaurants, bars and more that highlight live bands and musicians regularly.

Locals and visitors love to listen to the live music from the stages at Barrow Brewing Company and Johnny's Outback. Barrow Brewing is a restored 1950s granary that is both kid and pet friendly and hosts regular festivals. Johnny's Outback hosts regular outdoor concerts and attracts families with a menu that includes steak, BBQ and even corn dogs for the littles.

The village is also a Film Friendly Certified Community, which means that skilled liaisons throughout Salado are trained to help film productions enjoy and access area locations for TV, movie and game creations.
