Nestled just outside of the downtown area, Memorial is a prestigious neighborhood that is only continuing to grow and develop. The area previously known only as Memorial Drive first saw significant real estate growth in the 1950s and is now home to lively and affluent developments such as Memorial City. VisitHouston calls Memorial and the nearby Energy Corridor “one of the most thriving neighborhoods in the city.”

Within Memorial itself is Memorial City, a privately-owned “city within a city.” This real estate development is home to vibrant locations like The Lawn at Memorial City, which hosts live music, markets, and other exciting events. Similarly, Memorial City Mall is filled to the brim with quality places to shop and dine, whether it’s date night or a day out for the whole family.

A significant piece to Memorial’s growth is the expansion of the Energy Corridor to the immediate west. More than 60,000 people commute to work in the corridor each day as the area is home to the emerging and traditional energy companies that call Houston home.

The flower on the east end of Memorial Drive is Memorial Park, a nature haven twice the size of New York City’s Central Park. Memorial is home to a multitude of parks and natural spaces with George Bush Park to the west and the Buffalo Bayou Bike Trail as part of the southern border of the neighborhood.
