The largest city in Fort Bend County and located about 20 miles from downtown Houston, Sugar Land is home to more than 100,000 residents and some of the top software and energy corporations in the area. Companies like Texas Instruments, Accredo Packaging, Inc., Applied Optoelectronics, ChampionX, Schlumberger, Tramontina USA, Fluor Corporation, and Noble Drilling call Sugar Land home, lending to the city's makeup and population base.

Sugar Land gets its name from the sugar plantations that were fertile in the area thanks to the floodplains of the Brazos River. When those plantations consolidated into Imperial Sugar Company, Sugar Land was born as a company town. Today, it is one of the fastest growing cities in Texas, with a population surge of more than 41% since 2010.

The Sugar Land Space Cowboys, a Triple-A affiliate of the Houston Astros, play at local Constellation Field, which was built in 2012. Visitors also flock to see events at Smart

Financial Centre, which seats more than 6,000 people and opened in 2017 as a home for concerts and events.

Fort Bend County has more master-planned communities than any other county in the country, and Sugar Land has the most in the county. Many of the area's communities, like First Colony, Greatwood, New Territory, Telfair, Sugar Creek, River Park, Imperial, and Riverstone, feature their own country clubs, lakes, and golf courses.
