NEW BRAUNFELS

New Braunfels, Texas, is known for its proximity to San Antonio and its position near the Guadalupe and Comal rivers. Several of the city's parks, including Cypress Bend and Landa, are situated directly on these waterways, offering diverse recreational opportunities to residents wondering what to do in New Braunfels.

The city has a proud German and Hispanic heritage, which shines through to this day. Unsurprisingly, water sports and outdoor recreation represent huge components of community events. From leisurely tubing to wakeboarding, you can do it all in New Braunfels.

The bustling community also has many great places to eat, relax, and take in the sites. From major chains to local establishments, there is something for everyone in the New Braunfels dining scene.

A handful of the go-to eateries are even located on the water, including the Gristmill River Restaurant and Bar. The restaurant's structure dates back to the late 1800s in what was once a cotton processing facility.

If you are looking for a Texas town with plenty of amenities, New Braunfels is practically calling your name. The city has some of the best parks and recreational facilities in the region. The aforementioned Landa Park is one of the most iconic attractions in town. It features:

- Over 50 acres of parkland
- A hiking trail
- Paddle boats
- A miniature train
- Modern play areas
- An 18-hole golf course

Speaking of trails, there are plenty throughout the New Braunfels area. You can soak up the Texas sun and get a little fresh air.
