Welcome to Llano—pronounced "LAN-oh" by those who know—a historic Hill Country town set along the banks of the Llano River. About 75 miles northwest of Austin, Llano combines rugged Texas scenery, a walkable historic downtown, and the easygoing character of a community that still feels authentically small-town.

The Llano River runs right through the heart of town, providing a beautiful backdrop for swimming, fishing, kayaking, picnicking, and relaxing along the water. The iconic Roy B. Inks Bridge connects downtown with the riverfront, while nearby parks and natural areas make it easy to enjoy the outdoors without venturing far from town.

Llano's historic courthouse square and downtown are filled with locally owned shops, restaurants, galleries, and beautifully preserved architecture. The town's history stretches from its frontier and ranching roots to a colorful late-19th-century mining boom, and today that heritage remains an important part of Llano's distinctly Texas identity.

Food and community traditions are equally important here. Llano is well known for Texas barbecue, while annual celebrations bring residents and visitors together for everything from rodeos and live music to holiday festivities and the beloved Llano Earth Art Fest.

Whether you're exploring the river, wandering downtown, enjoying legendary barbecue, or simply taking the scenic route through the Hill Country, Llano offers a laid-back destination with plenty of character.
